1. Purpose

This document describes how the Company is structured from a reporting and level perspective, complementing the Company Overview & Organization Structure document. It answers the practical “who reports to whom” and “what does each level mean” questions employees and new hires frequently have.

2. Career Levels

The Company uses a consistent level structure across all functions, so that “Senior” or “Lead” means roughly the same seniority whether in Engineering, Sales, or HR:

Level Band	Typical Titles	Typical Experience
L1 — Associate	Associate, Analyst	0-2 years
L2 — Mid-level	Engineer, Specialist, Executive	2-5 years
L3 — Senior	Senior Engineer, Senior Specialist	5-8 years
L4 — Lead	Lead, Manager	8-12 years
L5 — Principal/Director	Principal, Director	12+

L5 — Principal/Director	Principal, Director	12+ years
L6 — Executive	VP, Chief Officer	Leadership track

Promotion between levels follows the Performance Management cycle described in the HR Employee Handbook, requiring two consecutive strong ratings plus Department Head sign-off for L4 and above.

3. Reporting Line Structure

Standard reporting lines flow as follows, from an individual contributor up to the CEO:

```
Individual Contributor (L1-L3)
        |
  Team Lead / Manager (L4)
        |
  Senior Manager / Director (L5)
        |
  Function Head (VP / Chief Officer, L6)
```

Most individual contributors are 3-4 reporting levels below the CEO. Managers (L4) typically have 5-8 direct reports; Directors (L5) typically oversee 2-4 managers rather than individual contributors directly.

4. Functional Org Chart Summary

Function	Function Head Title	Reports To
Engineering	Chief Technology Officer (CTO)	CEO
Sales & Marketing	Chief Revenue Officer (CRO)	CEO
Customer Success	VP, Customer Success	CEO
People & Culture (HR)	Head of HR	CEO

Finance & Admin	Chief Financial Officer (CFO)	CEO
Legal & Compliance	General Counsel	CEO

Detailed, individual-name org charts are maintained on the People Directory (internal tool) and are updated automatically whenever HR processes a role or reporting-line change — this document intentionally describes the structure/levels rather than current individual names, since those change frequently.

5. Matrix Reporting (Where It Applies)

Most employees have a single direct manager. Matrix (dual) reporting applies in two specific cases:

- Regional roles: an employee in the Singapore office may report functionally to a Function Head in Bengaluru while also having a local site lead for administrative/facilities matters.
- Cross-functional project roles: an employee temporarily embedded in a cross-functional initiative (e.g. a Finance analyst embedded in a product launch team) retains their primary Finance reporting line but has a secondary “project lead” relationship for the duration of the initiative, with performance input from both.

Matrix reporting does not change who conducts an employee’s formal performance review — that always remains the primary (functional) manager.

6. Department-to-Department Handoffs

Certain workflows deliberately cross department boundaries, and it helps to know which team owns which part:

Workflow	Starts With	Handoff To	Ends With
New hire	HR (Talent Acquisition)	IT (asset provisioning), Facilities	HR (Onboarding complete)
Employee exit	HR (resignation processed)	IT (access revocation), Finance (final settlement)	HR (exit interview closed)
Expense reimbursement	Employee (any dept.)	Manager (approval)	Finance (payment)
New software request	Employee (any dept.)	IT (security review)	Procurement (if paid license)
